Dean Novak displays components of his supposedly super-efficient gasoline burner.

By Jim Haberman—The Washington Post

Inventor's Explosive Secret

Getting 200 Miles a Gallon on a Car

[illegible]

For the past two nights, some 200 [illegible] have packed [illegible] Washington Hilton at $15 a [illegible] to learn how to get 200 miles [illegible] from the family car.

[illegible] he [illegible] they may [illegible] a [illegible] [illegible] Dean Novak, 34, [illegible] to keep the gasoline-to-[illegible] diagram and [illegible] on the [illegible]. Of course, almost the unemployed [illegible] aircraft engineer and aspiring [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] arrived to purchase a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]